HOMICIDE REPORT

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Keno Glass, 16, who was shot to death Tuesday morning, was the fourth homicide in Rogers Park this year, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found.

The North Side community area logged four killings in 2013, all in the second half of the year. RedEye breaks down Rogers Park homicide numbers.

Teen killed in Rogers Park

Chicago Tribune

Tuesday morning wasn't the first time that Hector Forastieri had to clean up blood from a sidewalk in Rogers Park.

A maintenance man at an apartment building at Ashland Avenue and Jonquil Terrace, Forastieri this time poured bleach and hot water on the pool of blood where Keno Glass, 16, was killed hours earlier as he visited friends.

Glass, an aspiring rapper who went by the name Kay Pee Lashore, was the latest casualty of gun violence in a Far North Side community that has now seen 14 people shot, three fatally, so far this year.

Forastieri, who has worked at the apartment building for about five years, said he has witnessed gunfire while walking down Jonquil, a pocket of the ethnically and racially diverse community of Rogers Park that for years has been plagued by gang conflicts and violence.

"I don't want to work over here, but I have to," Forastieri said.

Glass, a student at Senn High School who was on spring break, was shot in the head at about 2:40 a.m. Tuesday by one or more occupants of a gray minivan, Chicago police said. He died at the scene.

Rogers Park District officers, responding quickly to a call of shots fired, saw a vehicle flee the scene, said police, citing preliminary information. The vehicle crashed nearby and officers apprehended at least one possible suspect on foot, police said.

Police were questioning at least two persons of interest, but no charges had been filed as of Tuesday evening, authorities said.

The shooting happened across the street from the Stephen F. Gale Math and Science Academy and about three blocks from the Howard station on the CTA's Red Line.

Rogers Park is statistically one of the safest neighborhoods in the city. But so far this year, 13 people in addition to Glass have been shot, according to a Tribune analysis. Glass was the third fatal shooting victim in the neighborhood so far this year.

The previous homicide came April 7 when Darnell Gordon, 36, was fatally shot and two others wounded outside a convenience store near Ashland Avenue and Howard Street, just blocks south of Tuesday's shooting.

Let the band be your date

Charne Graham

redeye@tribune.com
@06moe05

How many times have you passed up the chance to go to a mind-blowing concert because you couldn't find anyone to go with? My guess: too many. Doing normal things in public alone is not social suicide; it's actually quite refreshing.

Without worrying about what people may think of you flying solo at a concert venue, you can do what you originally came out to do, and appreciate a live performance by one of your favorite artists. Slide your pride to the side and learn to have a good time with yourself.

Here are some of the many advantages of attending a concert alone.

You run on your own time

You can show up and leave any time you please without inconveniencing your friends. Do you have that homie who loves to get wasted, wander off and join the mosh pit, not to be heard from until two hours after the show? There won't be any waiting around to collect everyone if you're by yourself. Do you like to hang out after a show to get an autograph or a photo? There is no one rushing you to leave if it's just you. Friend freedom is needed every once in a while.

Getting a great spot/seat

If the show is general admission, it's way easier to slip into a decent area to see the stage as opposed to squeezing yourself and two other people into a cramped spot, resulting in you standing on your tippy toes to see. You can maneuver through the venue like a ninja and get incredible photos to make everyone who passed on the show jealous.

You are not being judged

You may have only one thing in common with the other people in the venue, but it's important: You enjoy the same music. How many times have you had to persuade someone to check out a band that they never heard of? When you're alone, you won't have to worry about looking too cool for your friends or that extremely dull date. You can even scream your head off when your favorite artist hits the stage and there is no judgment because, believe it or not, the people around you will be doing the same thing.

You meet new people

When you go out with another person, you don't always get the chance to strike up a conversation with someone who shares your taste in music. Breaking the ice with brief, random small talk or saying something witty to the person next to you can make you feel so much more comfortable. You also never know what interesting person you may come across at a concert. I've met editors of publications at shows by myself, and it opened doors for more writing gigs.

You didn't miss out

If you are a true music lover, nothing will stop you from seeing this show. Just think of the regret you'll feel waking up the next day and seeing on Instagram what you missed out on because you were concerned about what concert-goers thought of you being alone. No one cares about that. They'll be doing exactly what you came to do—enjoying an awesome performance.

Chicago ranks high for Millennial living

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

When it comes to ranking the best cities for Millennials, Chicago is just off the winners' podium.

Chicago is the fourth-best place to live for Millennials, according to a recently published survey by neighborhood and school data aggregator Niche. Using a variety of factors—including crime, income, age and median rent—the site ranked 25 major U.S. cities based on which is best for Millennials. A survey of current and former students in each city also was used to determine the rankings.

In addition to taking fourth place, the survey concluded that Wicker Park is the best Chicago neighborhood for Millennials.

The survey, paired with city data, concluded that 14 percent of Chicago's population is between 25-34, with a median rent of $931, a $30,061 median income and an "average" crime rate.

One caveat, however, is that data from the FBI's Uniform Crime Report is incomplete for Chicago, so median national crime values were assigned to the city.

If you have sleep apnea, you may qualify to participate in a clinical research study investigating a new drug treatment for sleep apnea.

Obstructive sleep apnea is associated with increased risk for cardiovascular disease, diabetes, daytime sleepiness and motor vehicle accidents. Treatment of sleep apnea is currently limited to surgery or medical device. A clinical trial is underway at the University of Illinois at Chicago evaluating an investigational drug therapy for the treatment of sleep apnea.

If you are between the ages of 21 and 64, and have obstructive sleep apnea, you may be eligible to participate in this study. Eligible study participants may receive study-related medical examinations and medication at no cost. Study participants will also be compensated for their time and travel.

Suspicious backpacks left at marathon site

BOSTON Not a perfect finish for the anniversary of the Boston Marathon bombings.

Boston police Tuesday evening evacuated Boylston Street near the marathon's usual finish line and took an unidentified man into custody after two suspicious backpacks were left lying on the street.

Shortly before the evacuation, local media posted video of a barefoot male wearing a black veil and a floppy black hat marching toward the marathon's finish line carrying a large, heavy-looking backpack while shouting, "Boston strong! Boston strong!"

"Boston strong" is the slogan popularized after last year's April 15 bombings at the marathon, which killed three people and wounded 264; the two bombs used in that attack were concealed in backpacks.

Earlier Tuesday, the finish line had been packed with mourners marking the anniversary of the attack. U.S. Vice President Joe Biden, other leaders and survivors recalled how those on the scene, from police officers to spectators, reacted immediately to help the wounded amid the chaos.

Former Boston Mayor Thomas Menino, who managed the response to the attack, recalled the struggles of the families of Martin Richard, 8, Krystle Campbell, 29, and Chinese national Lu Lingzi, 23, who died in the largest mass-casualty attack on U.S. soil since Sept. 11, 2001.

"You have struggled to get through the good days and the bad," Menino said. "I know because so many of you have told me about this year of firsts. First birthday without your beloved son, first holiday without your daughter, first July 4 where the fireworks scared you."

Suspect could face death penalty

The suspect in the killing of three people at two Jewish facilities near Kansas City over the weekend could face the death penalty on state murder charges filed Tuesday, prosecutors said. Frazier Glenn Cross, 73, likely will face federal charges that also could carry the death penalty.

Russia: Ukraine on brink of civil war

Russia declared Ukraine on the brink of civil war Tuesday as Kiev said an "anti-terrorist operation" against pro-Moscow separatists was underway, with troops and armored personnel carriers seen near a flashpoint eastern town.

Judge looks into claims of FBI misconduct

The military judge in the Sept. 11 conspiracy case signaled Tuesday he may order FBI agents to describe their secret investigation into whether members of the defense teams for al-Qaida leader Khalid Shaikh Mohammed and others illegally leaked a "manifesto" written by the alleged 9/11 mastermind about his time at the Guantanamo Bay prison.

COUSINS IN ARMS

Local soccer-star relatives love to win—especially against each other

By Emily Brown | REDEYE

The time: early 21st century. The place: an extra bedroom in an Elmhurst family home. The stakes: It never even mattered.

Mike Magee and Jackie Santacaterina have always tried to beat each other. From soccer to board games at family barbecues, neither wanted to lose.

Now, more than a decade later, the Chicago soccer-star cousins still find themselves attempting to one-up each other.

“Our family is highly competitive,” Magee said. “I’m sure Jackie and I have crossed paths in spoons or playing a board game. She’s witty and clever and catches me cheating. It gets pretty heated.”

That competitive spirit spills onto the soccer field.

Magee is a forward for the Fire and Santacaterina is a defender for the Red Stars. As Elmhurst and Geneva, Ill. natives, Magee and Santacaterina now play for their hometown teams.

“It’s an experience I never thought I would get,” Santacaterina said.

On Saturday, Toyota Park will host a Fire-Red Stars doubleheader. The Fire will play New England at 3 p.m., and the Red Stars will kick off their season at 5:45 p.m. against Western New York.

“When I found out [about the doubleheader], my smile was ear to ear,” said Magee, 29. “Her game is after mine, so I can win my game and then enjoy watching her game.”

Santacaterina is hopeful she will be able to play in the season opener. She’s coming back from a right hip injury, on which she had surgery in October.

The pair support each other in person whenever possible.

“I try to make every Red Stars game I can,” Magee said. “I travel a lot with the Fire, but once the [Red Stars] schedule comes out, I know pretty much right away which games I can be at. And everyone goes, our grandpa, parents, cousins.”

The family makes game days a daylong activity. They tailgate in the parking lot and maybe throw a football around.

“My whole family goes to all my games,” said Santacaterina, 26. “They’ll walk in [to the stadium] at the last minute, right when my name is called, cheering.”

Despite the travel and commitment that

"It shows how close we are," Magee said. "It's a trait our parents passed down to us. We have some of the best parents in the world. They instilled the importance of family in us."

Santacaterina always has looked up to her cousin. Magee started playing the sport at age 4. It was because of Magee and his older sister that Santacaterina followed suit when she was 5.

Growing up, the Magee home hosted countless soccer games between cousins. An extra bedroom in the home served as the venue. Two small goals served as furniture in the room, and they played with a soft soccer ball.

Their passion for family and a lifetime spent playing soccer together have built a strong bond that competitiveness can't fracture.

"I'm the proudest cousin in the world," Magee said of Santacaterina. "I watch her play and I'm so proud of her."

Controlling the heat

They may have called their debut ‘Sun Structures,’ but buzzy psych-rock outfit Temples prefers the darkness

By Andy Downing | FOR REDEYE

The first time Temples visited Chicago, in November, the city’s red-meat-and-potatoes reputation made the British psych-rock crew a bit anxious.

“We thought it would be really hard to find food without meat in it,” singer/guitarist/vegetarian James Bagshaw said. “I don’t know why we thought that. There was actually really great vegan and vegetarian food.”

It’s a good thing, too. Between Temples’ April 26 concert at Lincoln Hall and their scheduled appearance at this summer’s Lollapalooza, the band, which has been championed by everyone from Noel Gallagher to ex-Smiths guitarist Johnny Marr since releasing their debut full-length “Sun Structures” earlier this year, will be spending a fair amount of time in our city.

Reached on the road in early April, Bagshaw eagerly discussed his fondness for the music of the 1960s—but ask the 27-year-old singer about “Game of Thrones” and the conversation will die a swift, Ned Stark-like death.

You guys strike me as fans of the nighttime, so I’m guessing it’ll feel odd playing in the sun at Lollapalooza.

Yeah, playing shows in daylight is a funny one. When you’re at a festival and there are so many things going on and so many bands to see, you kind of forget about that. But we’d much rather play when it’s night, or at least when the sun is setting. For sure we’ll [be] playing in the baking heat in the afternoon come Lollapalooza.

That has to be rough since you all have fair complexions.

[Laughs.] We’ll have to crack the 50 SPF suntan lotion.

So “Keep in the Dark” isn’t just a song title

then. It’s almost a way of life.

I think so, yeah. You have to look after your skin, haven’t you? There’s no such thing as a healthy tan.

You’ve previously mentioned a fondness for artists like the Byrds and T. Rex. What is it about that era that really speaks to you?

The way it comes across is like no other kind of era of music. I think it’s got a rawness to it and an atmosphere around it in the way it’s recorded. It’s hard to put it into words. Those bands just connect with me, and all of us, really.

Do you ever get the sense you were born in the wrong decade?

No, ‘cause I think we’d view music in a different way if we had been. If we were around in the ‘60s, that music wouldn’t be as inspiring to us. There’s nothing worse than being inspired by another thing that’s already going on because you’re just a part of that rush. If we were around [then], I probably wouldn’t have played a 12-string because [The Byrds’] Roger McGuinn and [The Beatles’] George Harrison and loads of other people were already playing them. I’d want to try and go against that.

With psychedelic music there’s always that question about the influence of drugs. Do they play any role in that creative process for you?

I couldn’t possibly say, really. Yes and no and also maybe. When it comes down to recording, you need to have a clear head. I think it’s important to be able to think with your own mind because otherwise you’re watering down your real outlook.

You’ve received praise from Noel Gallagher and Johnny Marr, but I was more intrigued

» Watch at redeyechicago.com: “Mesmerise”

When’s the last time you received a handwritten letter through the post?

Oof. I don’t know, really. It was probably one from the bank saying I’ve gone into my overdraft, but that one wouldn’t have been handwritten.

Have you been at all tempted to re-record “The Golden Throne” as “The Iron Throne” to win over the “Game of Thrones” crowd?

No. I’ve never watched “Game of Thrones.” I don’t know what it is.

Really? I assumed most people from England were already in the cast.

[The song] has nothing to do with “Game of Thrones.” It’s not about a TV series. It’s actually about ... you know, I’m not going to tell you, because it doesn’t matter anyway.

Motown sounds

Allison Semmes stars as Diana Ross in
'Motown the Musical'

By Julia Borcherts | REDEYE

Chicago native Allison Semmes is a classical singer by training—she has a bachelor's degree in opera from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign—but she grew up with Motown in the house. “That was the popular music of [my parents'] time,” she said. “That was like their Beyonce.”

Now, Semmes, who grew up in Hyde Park, returns to Chicago to star as Diana Ross in the national tour of “Motown the Musical,” which kicks off with a three-month run at the Oriental Theatre. Based on Motown founder Berry Gordy's autobiography, the production—which celebrated its one-year anniversary on Broadway on Monday—explores the romance between Gordy and Ross through the rise of the hugely influential Detroit record label that launched the careers of Smokey Robinson, Michael Jackson, Stevie Wonder, Marvin Gaye and, of course, Ross. More than 50 iconic songs from the label are featured.

In the Broadway production, Semmes originated the role of The Supremes' backup singer Florence Ballard after having worked as an understudy and swing in “The Book of Mormon” and touring with “The Color Purple.” We called her to find out more.

Music is in her blood: When my mother was growing up, her father pressed records. She said that her parents would invite musicians over to play in their basement where they had, like, a bar. So just from that, it trickled down ... and I kept it going.

Her own favorite Motown artists: I love The Temptations; I'm just a sucker for harmony. And then, oh my God, the choreography was so smooth and—for lack of a better word—

MOTOWN THE MUSICAL

Go: 7:30 p.m. April 22-July 13 at the Oriental Theatre, 24 W. Randolph St.
Tickets: $27-$125. 800-775-2000;
broadwayinchicago.com

tempting. [Laughs.] And of course, Diana Ross. She had such a presence and style and sass about her.

Her costumes: Those gowns are amazing! ... You carry yourself differently when you have such stunning clothes on. I love that we go through the '80s, so you get the best of each decade.

Her biggest challenge playing a living legend:

I was a little nervous about whether people would say, “Oh, she doesn't look like Diana Ross.” But at the same time, that's not the point. It's not impersonation, but it's more capturing that spirit and the essence of the character. So I go back to the things that I worked on in rehearsal that bring out her essence as opposed to being a spitting image. 'Cause there's only one Diana Ross.

Where she likes to go now that she's back in town:

When it's warm out, I head straight to the lake—Promontory Point and just anywhere on the lakeside. I like to check out the MCA during the summer when they have jazz. I also like the Blues Festival and [I'll go] wherever they have live music—my parents are Lyric Opera subscription holders, so every now and then, they'll surprise me and take me to the opera.

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

There's at least one indisputable truth in "Heaven is for Real," stated by Reverend Todd Burpo (Greg Kinnear): "What we believe changes what we perceive."

Of course it does. It's the reason some will see that the film is based on a true story and interpret that as the true story of a little boy who saw heaven and returned to tell about it, and others will see it as the story of a boy who said he did. Regardless, it's a movie that toys with ideas only to cast them aside and let feelings stand in their place.

A husband and father of two who somehow finds time to be a volunteer firefighter, wrestling coach and owner of a garage door service and repair company, Todd is stumped when his four-year-old son Colton (Connor Corum) begins telling unusual stories after surviving a ruptured appendix. The kid says he had an out-of-body experience and witnessed his mom (Kelly Reilly of "Flight") asking townspeople to pray and dad "yelling at God," which he was, in the inevitable "Don't you take my son!" scene. More notably, Colton says that he went to heaven, where he sat on Jesus' lap and the angels laughed when the boy asked if they could sing Queen's "We Will Rock You."

Heaven is for Real

Thankfully, the angels make no ultra-conservative statements about the band's singer, the late Freddie Mercury, or his spot in heaven.

For a while, "Heaven is for Real" surprises: It threatens to take a faith-based story (note the pre-Good Friday release date) and suggest that believers may backpedal when faced with a spiritual challenge. It's only a tease; the film never requires Todd—or anyone else—to make a tough decision. The church board (including Thomas Haden Church and Margo Martindale) ponders replacing him, but not urgently. Todd owes mega-bucks but never considers profiting from his son's story. The Reverend mostly brushes aside the question of how confirming heaven's existence may impact how people live.

So "Heaven is for Real" fumbles for um-when-in-doubt-just-believe answers instead of following through on the hard questions. Puzzling on a lower level are the bizarre filmographies of co-writer Chris Parker (who wrote "Vampire in Brooklyn," straight-to-video "Mulan II" and dance-related bomb "Battle of the Year") and director/co-writer Randall Wallace ("The Man in the Iron Mask," "We Were Soldiers," "Secretariat"). They've now collaborated to depict a conventional version of heaven and perhaps the first movie to take place in Nebraska and Lithuania and absolutely nowhere in between.

Declutter for cash

Chicago Tribune

The average home has $7,000 worth of unused items simply taking up space, according to a study by market research firm NPD Group.

But there's no reason your home should be doubling as a storage unit.

"With the help of great websites and apps, it's easier than ever to get rid of clothing, books furniture, electronics, even art this spring—and to earn some cash," said Farrell Klein, spokeswoman at fashion resale website thredup.com who suggested using the following spring-cleaning sites to earn money while getting rid of unused items.

Electronics

Nextworth.com: Sell everything from smartphones to video games to laptops for cash (right now, an iPhone 4S can generate $100). They'll pay upfront within a week by Paypal, a check or a Target gift card, and they'll wipe your item clear of personal info. If the condition of your item is better than described when it arrives, they'll pay more than your original quote. If it's reasonably close to your description, they'll honor it and forgive price differences that are less than 10 percent or $10—and you can ship and insure your items for free via UPS.

Furniture

Chairish.com: Upload your furniture details on the site, and this company will take care of payments—and in some cases, they offer white-glove pickup and storage services. They'll accept everything except used mattresses, convertible sofas or recliners. The pieces must cost at least $250 for larger items and $150 for items that are shippable via traditional methods. Sellers get 80 percent of the item's selling price.

High-end art, shoes, clothing

Therealreal.com: Earn up to 70 percent of the resale value for your art, accessories, jewelry and clothing by selling that designer bag or shoes—or any other luxury items to The Real Real. They even offer home pickup service in Chicago.

Clothing

Thredup.com: Fill a prepaid, pre-addressed bag with used or new clothing and you can earn up to 80 percent of the resale value in cash or a shopping credit back to the site. They accept and sell adult and children's clothing.

Books

Bookscouter.com: Type in the International Standard Book Number (ISBN) and the site will search more than 40 book-buying sites that are buying used textbooks and other books to give you a quote for yours. It's a free site with no registration required that aims to help you find the best place to sell your used book.

Gift cards

Giftcardgranny.com: Trade in gift cards you aren't planning on using for cards you will use—or sell them here for cash. The percentage back depends on the gift card you're selling and the merchant you sell it to via Giftcardgranny.

Rock those locks

The Mummy Returns 2001

We're seeing some serious overlap with Johnny Depp's "Pirates of the Caribbean" look here.

Get Smart 2008

Remember those commercials for spray-on hair where the guy stuck his bald spot through a hole in a big piece of cardboard? Yeah. That.

The Scorpion King 2002

Long hair must denote power for the king in this spinoff. If you're gonna wear it pulled back all the time, there's no real point in growing it out, dude.

The many movie hairstyles of Dwayne Johnson

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson knows that in the wrestling ring, a flowing mane may not be the best idea. Unfortunately, he doesn't always heed that advice in his movie roles. New scenes from his "Hercules" remake were released last week on MTV, and show Dwayne rocking some SERIOUS locks.

But this isn't the first time he's gotten hilariously hairy for a role. We took a look back at the muscle man's past styles, and found some pretty terrifying stuff.

HERE, 'GIRL'

Fans of Chicagoan Gillian Flynn's thriller "Gone Girl" went nuts Tuesday over the debut of the first official trailer for David Fincher's movie adaptation starring Ben Affleck. As expected, the two-minute sneak peek alludes to one hell of a creepshow coming our way Oct. 3. Children of the 1990s might recognize the eerie music—a cover of Elvis Costello's "She"—as that one song from that one "Notting Hill" scene. Hint: "Gone Girl" isn't going to be like "Notting Hill." Like, at all.

HOT DATE
APRIL 22

Watch your desk. David Letterman: The new guy is gonna pay you a visit. On Tuesday, Stephen Colbert—the man who will replace Letterman next year—will be a guest on "The Late Show," according to deadline.com. This will end in either a murder or a makeout session.

At one point, we talked about killing off every major character, and one particularly dark week along the way, we talked about killing everybody—having some sort of bloodbath of an ending. But you live with those ideas for a while and you think, 'Just because an ending is dramatic or perhaps overly dramatic does not ensure that it will be satisfying.'

—"Breaking Bad" creator Vince Gilligan, telling Entertainment Weekly that he almost ended the series with an even bloodier finale

Just the tights—& the tats

Lake Bell graces the cover of Esquire's "The Next Big Thing" issue in black stockings and not much else. An alternate cover has a shirtless Tom Hardy showing off some body ink. The mag suggests Bell might be "the most important actor/director/writer of her generation," while Hardy could be "the greatest actor of his generation."

Twitter dancing

Some people will do anything to gain Twitter followers. Kate Walsh, who plays an ex-stripper in FX's "Fargo" and has 500,000 Twitter followers, did a pole dance Tuesday on "The Ellen DeGeneres Show" as Ellen, who has 28.5 million Tweepies, egged her on.

CHELSEA WON'T BE 'LATE'

Chelsea Handler will not replace Craig Ferguson as host of "The Late Late Show," CBS tells Vulture. Despite Handler's sly Instagram of a "business meeting" with CBS, the network denies speculation she will take over. The "Chelsea Lately" host is returning to Chicago on June 20 to tape her latest comedy special. Tickets for the two Harris Theater shows go on sale at 10 a.m. Friday.
